

PROFESSIONAL PROFILE

Mr. Cashman is an expert in dredging, marine construction, barge and heavy equipment leasing, demolition, and heavy civil construction. Since 1974 when he formed a small home improvement start-up in Quincy, Massachusetts, Jay Cashman's contracting experience has evolved to become a group of companies that employ more than 1,000 people in the disciplines of marine construction, dredging, vessel leasing, renewable and wind-powered energy, real estate development, environmental remediation, heavy/civil construction, water storage, and power plant maintenance. The Cashman Companies' geographic reach extends across 35 states, the Caribbean, Central and South America as well as the Middle East. The public- and private-sector projects completed by his firms have earned national recognition for their complexity, engineering significance, and historic importance.

Mr. Cashman directs a comprehensive portfolio of companies, each specializing in tactically aligned areas from dredging to wind power to civil engineering. The diverse capabilities of the collective companies allow for the highest levels of performance and efficiency with each project undertaken, whether large or small. But never at the cost of safety, quality or professionalism, which shape the foundation of The Cashman Companies. Mr. Cashman takes pride in assuring that each project is specially developed according to its unique goals and is delivered on time and on budget.

Since 1969, The Cashman Companies have applied expertise and resources to successfully complete some of the most challenging and noteworthy construction projects in North America and beyond. Whether revitalizing communities and waterways or redefining power generation and infrastructures, Mr. Cashman is a recognized innovator in multi-disciplinary infrastructure construction.
